McChoir's Music Corner

One of my favorite Easter tunes is the one used today for Communion: LAUDA ANIMA (Praise My Soul the King of Heaven). It was written in 1868 by the British church musician John Goss, who was a significant historical figure in the revival of British cathedral music in the late 19th century. "Lauda Anima" is the Latin beginning of Psalm 103, upon which this hymn is based. A contemporary review of the hymn was offered in a musical journal in 1869, stating that "it is at once the most beautiful and dignified hymn tune which has lately come under our notice." (The Musical Times, June 1869) What I love about this tune is that for the congregation, it is quite simple: lots of repeated notes, stepwise motion, and the jumps up and down on the staff are always managed gracefully with stepwise motion after a leap is made. On the organist's side of things—there is a harmonically rich sequence that allows us to do a little more 'unique' harmonies as we play the melody. It's the perfect marriage of a piece of music that is simple and accessible enough for the average church goer, and also musically invigorating for the musician who plays. The British have long been known for their keen sense of melody and harmony in a pleasing combination, this is a prime example in action. Alleluia, He is risen!
